The sample site is located between the stream mouth of Honolua Stream and an old boat ramp. The shoreline is a mixture of cobblestones and boulders. The bay is part of a DLNR marine conservation district. Due to the current patterns of the near shore waters, the bay may remain muddied after heavy rain showers.

Sample site located in the near shore waters fronting the red pack seen in the center of the photo. The stream mouth can be seen to the left of the pack.
