FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS
Q.	How long will it take for my application to be approved or denied?
A.	You can apply for a temporary registration 60 days prior to your desired start date. You may request the start date of your registration to coincide with your arrival in Hawaii. Applications will be reviewed in the order received and registry staff will not be able to expedite any individual applicant based on their travel dates.

	Registry turnaround time is posted on the Department of Health Medical Cannabis landing page. This will help you gauge where your application is in our queue.
Q.	How will I know when my application is approved or denied?
A.	Once your application is approved, you will receive an email notification stating your approval. You will then be able to log into your account to retrieve access to your Hawaii medical cannabis 329 registration card. You should save a copy to your mobile device and/or print and keep a copy for your use.  If your application is denied, you will receive an email notification with reasons for the denial. You will not receive a refund. You may re-apply again with all applicable fees. This denial will not be considered as one of the two terms you are eligible for in the calendar year.
Q.	I want to apply for an out-of-state registration card for my upcoming trip, but I will be returning later in the year. Can I apply again?
A.	Yes, you are eligible for up to two terms in a single calendar year . Each temporary card is valid up to 60 days or up to the expiration date of your “home state/territory” medical cannabis card, whichever date comes first. If you will need another temporary card after its expiration, and your “home state/territory” medical cannabis card is still valid, you can reapply once more.
Q.	My “home state” medical cannabis card expires during my trip. Will I be able to apply for a temporary medical cannabis registration card?
A.	You may apply, but keep in mind that your temporary Hawaii registration expiration date will not exceed the expiration date of your “home state/territory” medical cannabis card. This applies even though the term may be shorter than 60 days or than the length of your stay. This will be considered as one of the two terms you are eligible for in the calendar year.  Please be advised that you will not be protected under Hawaii state law once your temporary Hawaii state 329 card expires.
Q.	I will be travelling to Hawaii more than twice a year; can I apply for an in-state registration card?
A.	Yes, we do not require residency for our in-state program. So long as you meet the eligibility requirements and see an in-state physician/APRN, you may apply as an in-state patient.  You will have to create an account using a valid email address, then return to the https://medmj.ehawaii.gov and apply as an in-state patient.
Q.	I’ve already registered twice in the calendar year but just booked another trip to Hawaii. Is there a way to register so that I am protected during my next trip?
A.	Yes, if you are frequenting our state, it may be in your best interest to see a physician/APRN in Hawaii to help monitor your medical condition(s) and provide ongoing care while you are in Hawaii. We do not require residency for our in-state program and you may apply as an in-state patient as long as you meet the eligibility requirements .  You will, however, have to create an entirely new account using a completely different valid email address. After the new account has been created, you will then return to the https://medmj.ehawaii.gov website and apply as an in-state patient.
