Holiday Safe Gatherings Campaign Launches

Gatherings are the primary cause of COVID-19 clusters and the DOH has produced a new campaign called “How to Gather. For Real.” - to demonstrate how to gather safely with ‘ohana, friends, and co-workers. It offers practical guidance consistent with recommendations from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Two public service announcements (PSAs), one focusing on gatherings with family and friends and the other on workplace gatherings began airing this week on TV, radio, online, in print, and on social media.

“The PSAs depict real-life scenarios and tips that we can all use to gather and interact with others in a safer way,” said Health Director Dr. Elizabeth Char. “We urge everyone to follow these practices and help us reduce the spread of COVID-19.”

To help drive the message home DOH enlisted the support of local personalities:

In the first spot Chelei Kahalewai provides tips about celebrating her aunty’s birthday in a new way. “I wanted to help spread awareness about safety in group settings during COVID and felt this was a great opportunity to do that,” Kahalewai said.

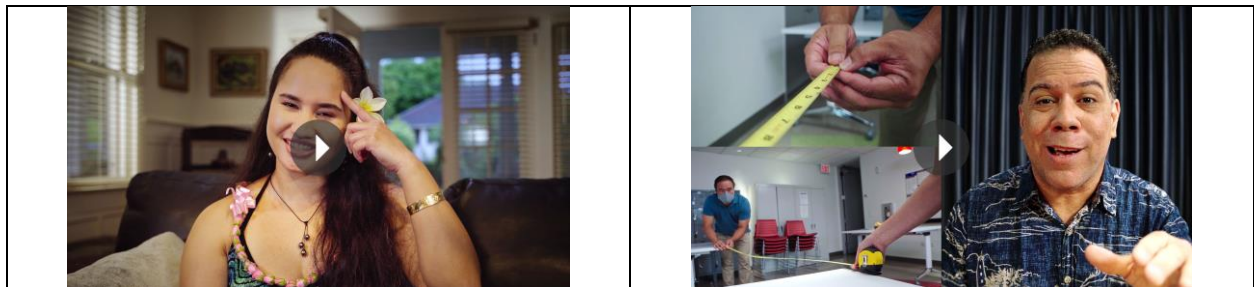

The other spot about safe workplace gatherings features Daryl Bonilla, an actor and stand-up comedian who enjoys entertaining audiences with his local-style humor. “I liked using light local humor to help encourage people to continue to practice physical distancing and cleanliness while still maintaining some semblance of normalcy,” Bonilla said.

It is important to remember that virtual celebrations still pose the lowest risk for spread. Hawai’i residents should pay careful attention to COVID-19 levels in their community and use health guidance to determine whether to postpone, cancel, or limit the number of attendees at gatherings. Things to consider are case numbers, behaviors, location, duration, and number of invitees including out-of-state guests.

Honolulu Couple Finds Preparation is Key to Successful Pre-Travel Testing

When Jeff and Jean Lilley flew to Dallas to be present for the birth of their first grandchild, they knew there was a chance they’d have to quarantine when they returned home.

However, they report their experience with Hawai’i’s pre-travel testing program for incoming passengers, which started on October 15, was largely positive. Jeff, the pastor of the Lutheran Church of Honolulu, says preparation and practice were key to a smooth return to the islands and bypassing the mandatory 14-day quarantine with a negative test result from a trusted testing and travel partner.

You can learn about their experience in this video: <https://vimeo.com/476966669>

Here are the Lilley’s recommendations for preparing to travel out-of-state:

- Set up your account at travel.hawaii.gov well in advance.
- Familiarize yourself with what kind of information you'll need to provide about your itinerary, current health status, residence/lodging, and testing status.
- Know your technology and practice uploading PDF files to your phone so you can seamlessly transfer them to the Safe Travels app. Follow the directions on uploading a quality PDF file for your test result with the required information, which will help improve chances of expediting verification of test results. Please visit <https://ets.hawaii.gov/travelhelp/> for more information.
- Review the options for trusted testing and travel partners, as the state doesn't accept COVID-19 testing from non-approved partners. Research which partners provide testing in your departure city or town and be sure to schedule within the 72-hour departure window.

The Lilley's were among the 204,685 trans-Pacific and international travelers to arrive in Hawai'i between Oct. 15 and yesterday.
